Women and Education

“Woman is an incarnation of Shakti- the Goddess of Power. If she is bestowed with education, India’s strength will be doubled. Let the lamp of educating daughters be lit up in everyone’s heart.”

- Prime Minister Narendra Modi

Education is a milestone of women empowerment due to the fact it permits them to respond to challenges, to confront their traditional function and change their life.

With the ongoing multi-faceted process for women empowerment confidently taking over social spaces, there has been an advantageous affect in the corporate world. If we look back ten years from now, positions of power for women have increased to a large extent. As the landscape has changed, it is found that a trend of women with education, ambition and passion has taken every sector through storm. Women have a very indistinctive position in our economic system and are an imperative part of the society. The only way a society or state can move forward, and aspire to monetary growth and development is not just through education- but especially education among the women. Today women play the heroic role in development of the society. Society cannot be created and developed without the active contribution of women. In India women do not make use of their rights and they are not even considered independent to take any decision. In order to provide women the equal status in the society, it is very crucial for women to be empowered.

“To awaken the people, it is the women who must be awakened. Once she is on the move, the family moves, the village moves, the nation moves.” - Pt. Jawaharlal Nehru

Trends in ICT Integrated Teacher Education

Prof. Laxmidhar Behera & Mr. Amlesh Kumar

Introduction

The 21st Century is known for creating and building knowledge wherein the Information and Communication Technology (ICT) plays a key role. Preparing students for the 21st century requires the use of ICTs and technology in the educational process. There is no doubt that technology in this contemporary society is used more and more widely, especially for teaching and learning. This is because modern technology offers many tools that can be used in classrooms to improve teaching and learning quality (Bruniges, 2003; Lefebvre, Deaudelin, & Loïselle, 2006; Bingimlas, 2009; Hamidi et al., 2011; Hussain et al., 2011). When ICTs used appropriately, particularly computers and Internet technologies assist new ways of teaching and learning rather than simply allow teachers and students to do what they have already done before in a better way. These new ways of teaching and learning are underpinned by constructivist theories of learning and constitute a shift from a teacher-centered pedagogy to a learner-centered approach. ICTs can effectively transform the learning environment into learner-centered. Researchers have shown that the proper use of ICTs can catalyze the paradigmatic shift in both content and pedagogy that is at the heart of educational reform in the 21st century. If designed and implemented properly, ICT supported education can promote the acquisition of new knowledge and skills that will empower students for lifelong learning.

The idea of integrating ICT into teaching and learning creates a concern between pedagogy and technology. To master ICT

Learning Outcomes of Students at Upper Primary Level in Social Sciences: A Critical Study of National Achievement Survey 2017

Prof. (Dr.) Laxmidhar Behera

Background of the Problem

There is unanimous agreement among educationists today, that the quality of primary and upper primary education in almost all parts of our country is poor. A majority of our children in rural and even urban areas are left with no option but to attend poor quality and often dysfunctional schools. A historical perspective can help us understand how this came about. Under the British, education was elitist and was restricted to few, but with the gradual spread of modernisation, the Indian government strive to make it the universal privilege of the masses. To achieve this, their efforts were concentrated exclusively on increasing the number of schools and teachers to provide better access. Numerous schemes, such as mid-day meal scheme, provided incentives to the pupils from the deprived sections, enabling their attendance. These
