INTRODUCTION

The National Education Policy 2020 advocates promoting equitable and inclusive education. This policy acknowledged the significance of creating enabling mechanisms for providing Children with Special Needs (CWSN) or Divyang, the same opportunities of obtaining a quality education as other children are availing. The idea of providing quality education for learners of socially disadvantaged, minority and persons with disabilities as an integral part of the general education system continued to be a concern until now and the process is called "Inclusion" (UN 1990). One significant area of Inclusive education is a system that aims to provide a favorable setting for achieving equal opportunities and full participation for all children within the general education system. It is a process intended to respond to students' diversity by increasing their participation and reducing exclusion within and from education (guidelines for inclusion, ensuring access to education for all UNESCO, 2005). Inclusive education is concerned with removing all barriers to learning and with the participation of all learners vulnerable to exclusion and marginalization. It is a strategic approach designed to facilitate learning success for all children. It addresses the common goals of decreasing and overcoming all exclusion from the human right to education, at least at the elementary level, and enhancing access, participation, and learning success in quality basic education for all (UNESCO, 1998).

In India like any other country, Inclusive education is one pertinent national concern in the education system. According to the Draft of Inclusive Education Scheme, MHRD, GOI, 2003, 'Inclusive education means all learners, young people-with or without disabilities being able to learn together in ordinary preschool provisions, schools, and community educational settings with an appropriate network of support services. Students with disabilities can greatly benefit from inclusion (NCF 2005) and with all support, in inclusive classrooms, their capability can be reached at its optimal level. The NPE (1986) and its revised form with the Program of Action (1992) has emphasized the integration of children with disabilities with other groups for enabling them to socialize and develop courage and confidence in them. Besides the National curriculum framework for school (NCFSE 2000), which was brought out by NCERT recommended 'Inclusive school' for pupils with special educational needs, for providing quality education to all learners. It has also added 'segregation or isolation is good neither for the learners with disabilities nor for the general learners without disabilities. The societal requirement is that learners with special needs should be educated along with other learners in inclusive schools, which are cost-effective and have sound pedagogical practices (NCIERT 2000). According to MHRD Action Plan for Inclusive Education of Children and Youth (2003), inclusive education is defined as an approach, which seeks to address the learning needs of all children, youth and adults with a specific focus on those who are vulnerable to marginalization and exclusion. It implies all learners, young people - with or without disabilities being able to learn together through access to common pre-school provisions, schools, and community educational settings with an appropriate network of support services. Concerted efforts of government in terms of the journey of Right based and need-based inclusive education can be seen from recommendations of commissions, policy, and programs such as national commissions & policies: Kothari Commission (1964), National education policy (1968), National policy on education (1986), revised national policy of education (1992), national curriculum framework (2005), national policy for persons with disabilities (2006), National Acts & programmes: IEDS (1974), SSA (2000), RMSA (2009), IEDSS (2013). Goal 4 of SDG mentioned to "ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all" by 2030 (NEP, 2020).

RATIONALE OF THE STUDY

In a comprehensive term, Inclusion is about consciously putting into action values based on: equity, entitlement, community participation, and respect for diversity (Booth et al., (2003). According to Ballard (1999), inclusive education means the removal of barriers to learning for all children and "must attend to increasing participation not just for disabled students but for all those experiencing disadvantages, whether this results from poverty, sexuality, minority ethnic status, or other characteristics assigned significance by the dominant culture in their society". Moreover, Inclusion in a larger picture is a political struggle against exclusive attitudes, approaches, and structures of the overall education system (Ballard and Barton, 1995). At the same time, inclusive education is seen as an approach and means to respond to diversity, wherein the emphasis will be on welcoming and valuing a diverse range of interests, needs, abilities, and achievements which will bring about reducing barriers and hindrances to learning and participation for all learners. It is believed that Improvement in inclusion will follow exclusion as inclusion is related to a decrease in inequity and inequality both in the social and economic spheres, both in starting positions and opportunities. At the same time, inclusive education is also commonly understood as an issue concerning only disabled students or those categorized as having special educational needs.

Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) recommends inclusive and equitable quality education and advocates promoting lifelong learning opportunities for all. RPwD 2016-Schools provide inclusive education to students with and without disability to learn together and the system of teaching-learning is suitably adapted to meet the learning needs of students with disabilities. NEP 2020-Children with disabilities, children from socio-economically disadvantaged groups (SEDGs)

OBJECTIVES

1. To study the differences in the attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their:

- Gender
- Pedagogical specialization
- Educational qualification

2. To study the differences in the knowledge of B.ED. Special Education (III) students about the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their:

- Gender
- Pedagogical specialization

METHODOLOGY

Research Design:

A quantitative descriptive survey method was utilized for the conduct of the present study. In view of the lockdown and need for maintaining social distancing due to COVID-19, the study was conducted using an online survey tool. Data were analyzed using statistical methods and then interpreted for arriving at conclusions.

Population:

The population of this study consisted of Special Education (HI) students studying in Special B.Ed. colleges of Bhubaneswar.

Sample:

The sample of the study was 84 B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students of AYJNISHD(D), Jatni, Bhubaneswar for the 2020-2022 session.

Sampling Technique:

The convenience sampling technique was used for collecting information from prospective teachers.

Tools:

Investigators used a self-constructed e-questionnaire to assess the attitude and the knowledge of Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom. The final set of e-questionnaire was named as,

- Attitude Inventory on Inclusive Classroom (AIIC) (five-point Likert scale)
- Knowledge Test on Inclusive Education (KTIE)

For the scoring attitude of Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom, the investigator used a Likert scale to score. In positive items related to the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom (strongly agree) is scored as 05 marks, (agree) is scored as 04 marks, (neutral) is scored as 03 marks, (disagree) is scored as 02 marks, and (strongly disagree) 01 marks. Whereas in the second-hand negative items related to educational psychology (strongly agree) is scored as 01 marks, (agree) is scored as 02 marks, (neutral) is scored as 03 marks, (disagree) is scored as 04 marks, and (strongly disagree) 05 marks. For measuring knowledge four alternatives were given for each question. For scoring of the knowledge test, 1 mark is given to correct answers and zero for incorrect answers.

Validity and Reliability:

The content validity was established based on the discussion and responses by the experts. Split-half testing was used to measure the internal consistency of the tools and Pearson's Correlation Coefficient was applied to determine the reliability of the instrument. A coefficient value of 0.67, and 0.70 indicated that the research instrument for measuring attitude and knowledge respectively was reliable; hence it was adopted for getting the desired information for the study.

Procedure of Data Collection

The study aims to find out the attitude and the knowledge of prospective teachers towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom. The link to the prepared e-questionnaire was sent to the 84 B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students of AYJNISHD(D), Jatni, Bhubaneswar of 2020-2022 session through email and other sharing platforms. An informed consent form was also attached to the e-questionnaire, and each participant consented to participate in the survey after reading the consent form. They filled in their responses and submitted their feedback online. The researcher compiled the online responses for further analysis of data and for testing the hypotheses.

Analysis of Data:

The data collected through the administration of the two tests were analyzed through applying required statistical methods, i.e. mean, S.D., t-test, ANOVA and correlation-coefficient.

Delimitations:

The present study is confined to 84 B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students of AYJNISHD(D), Jatni, Bhubaneswar for the 2020-2022 session.

FINDINGS ON HYPOTHESES TESTING

H0 1. There is no significant difference between the mean scores of attitude of male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.

For testing the above hypothesis t-test has been done. The mean, standard deviation, and t-test and the result of this analysis have been shown in the following table 3.1:

Table 3.1 t-test on the attitude of male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.

Gender	N	Mean	SD	df	t-value	Remarks
Male	31	57.45	7.08	82	0.44	Not Significant
Female	53	56.68	8.09

The findings of the above result show that the mean scores of the male B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students are higher than the female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students. The obtained t-value 0.44 is less than the required critical value at 82df. It is interpreted that mean is not significant at 0.05 level. Hence, the null hypothesis is accepted and it can be said that there is no significant difference in attitude of male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom. This outcome can also be seen below in figure 3.1:

H0 2. There is no significant difference between the mean scores of Knowledge of male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.

For testing the above hypothesis t-test has been done. The mean, standard deviation, and t-test and the result of this analysis have been shown in the following table 3.2:

Table 3.2 t-test on the knowledge of male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.

Gender	N	Mean	SD	df	t-value	Remarks
Male	31	10.74	3.14	82	0.19	Not Significant
Female	53	10.60	3.02

The findings of the above result show that the mean scores of the male B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students are higher than the female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students. The obtained t-value 0.19 is less than the required critical value at 82df. It is interpreted that the mean is not significant at 0.05 level. Hence, the null hypothesis is accepted and it can be said that there is no significant difference in knowledge of male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom. This outcome can also be seen below in figure 3.2:

H0 3. There is no significant difference between the mean scores of attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their pedagogical specialization (Science, Social Science, and Language).

For testing the above hypothesis ANOVA has been done. The result of this analysis has been shown in the following table 3.3:

Table 3.3 ANOVA on attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their pedagogical specialization (Science, Social Science, and Language).

Source of Variation	Sum of Squares	df	Mean Square	F	P-value	Remarks
Between Groups	134.08	2	67.04	1.13	0.32	Not Significant

The results as can be seen in table 3.3 show that the calculated F-ratio is 1.13 which is less than the F-table value at 0.05 level for (2,83) df. Thus, the formulated null hypothesis is not rejected and it can be said that there is no significant difference between the mean scores of attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their pedagogical specialization (Science, Social Science, and Language). This outcome can also be seen below in figure 3.3:

H0 4. There is no significant difference between the mean scores of knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (III) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their pedagogical specialization (Science, Social Science, and Language).

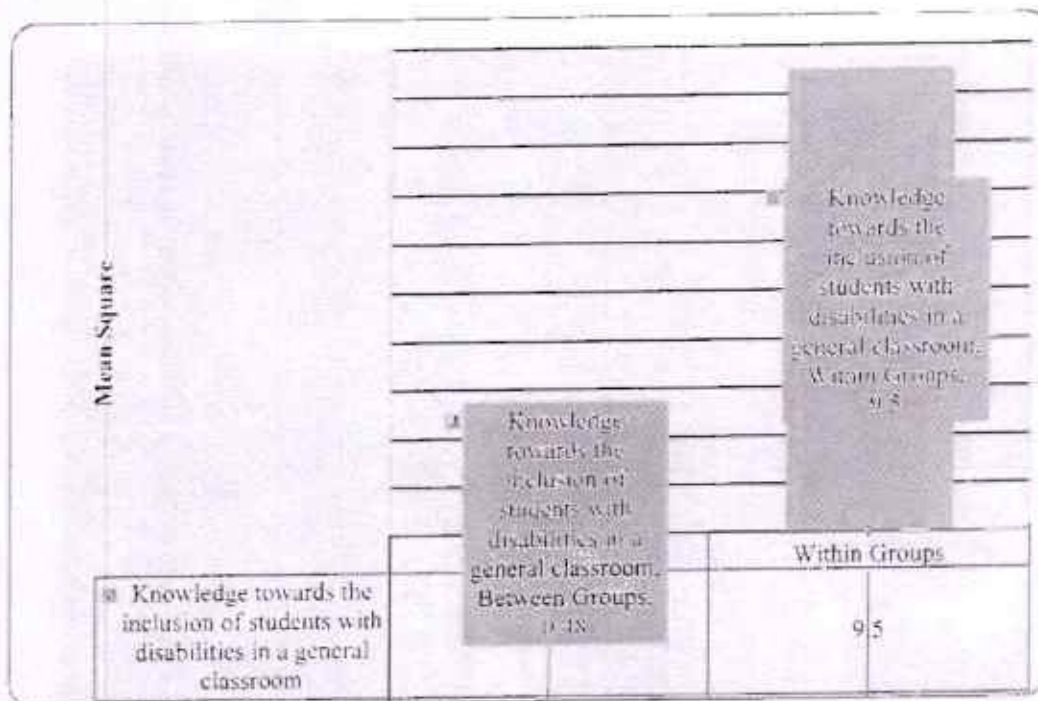

For testing the above hypothesis ANOVA has been done. The result of this analysis has been shown in the following table 3.4:

Within Groups	770.01	81	9.50
Total	770.98	83

The results as can be seen in table 3.4 show that the calculated F-ratio is 0.05 which is less than the F-table value at 0.05 level for (2,83) df. Thus, the formulated null hypothesis is not rejected and it can be said that there is no significant difference between the mean scores of knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their pedagogical specialization (Science, Social Science, and Language). This outcome can also be seen below in figure 3.4:

H0 5. There is no significant difference between the mean scores of attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their educational qualification (UG and PG).

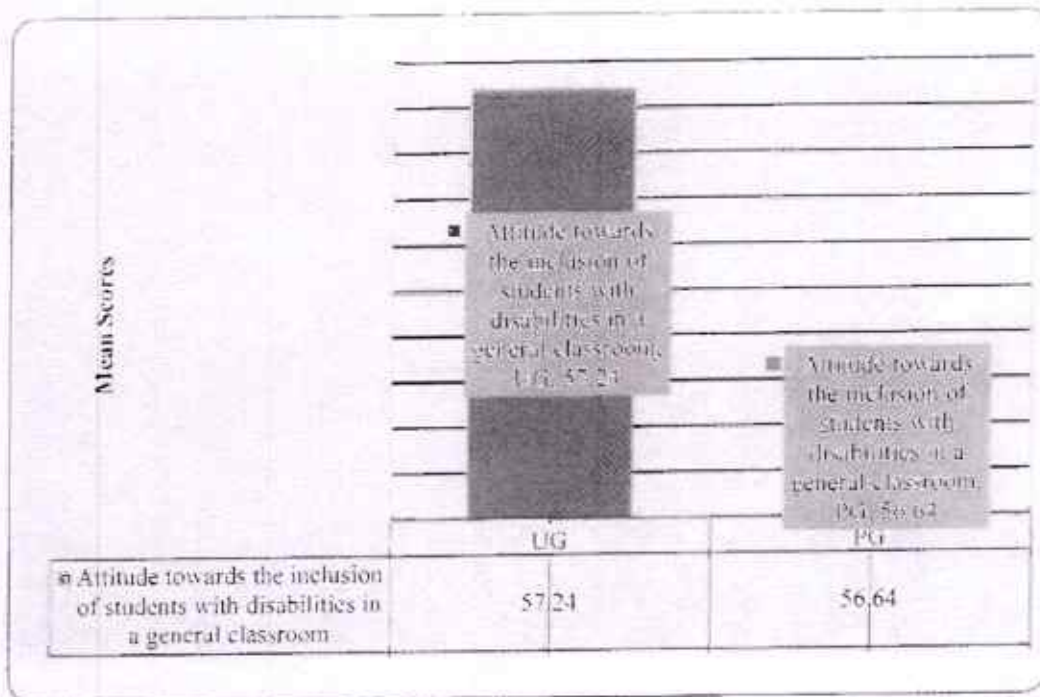

For testing the above hypothesis t-test has been done. The mean, standard deviation, and t-test and the result of this analysis have been shown in the following table 3.5:

Table 3.5 t-test on the attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their educational qualification (UG and PG).

Gender	N	Mean	SD	df	t-value	Remarks
UG	45	57.24	7.42	82	0.55	Not Significant
PG	39	56.64	8.10

The findings of the above result show that the mean scores of the UG, B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students are higher than the PG, B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students. The obtained t-value 0.55 is less than the required critical value at 82df. It is interpreted that the mean is not significant at 0.05 level. Hence, the null hypothesis is accepted and it can be said that there is no significant between the mean scores of attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their educational qualification (UG and PG). This outcome can also be seen below in figure 3.5:

The findings of the above result show that the mean scores of the UG, B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students are higher than the PG, B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students. The obtained t-value 0.75 is less than the required critical value at 82df. It is interpreted that mean is not significant at 0.05 level. Hence, the null hypothesis is accepted and it can be said that there is no significant between the mean scores of knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their educational qualification (UG and PG). This outcome can also be seen below in figure 3.6;

H0 7. There is no significant relationship between the attitude and knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.

For testing the above hypothesis correlation coefficient was found out and the result of this analysis has been shown in the following table 3.7:

Table 3.7 Correlation on attitude and knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.

Knowledge on the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom	Pearson Correlation	1	0.139
	Sig. (2-tailed)		0.209
	N	84	84

Correlation is not significant at 0.05 level.

From table 3.7 the calculated value of  $r$  is 0.139 which is less than the critical value required at a 5% level of significance, hence the null hypothesis is accepted. It means that there is no significant relationship between the attitude and knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.

MAJOR FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

- The male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students do not differ in their attitude and knowledge towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom. It might be due to the reason that the male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students are almost equally oriented through their curricular transactions in a classroom.
- There is no significant difference between the mean scores of knowledge of male and female B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.
- There is no significant difference between the mean scores of attitude of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their pedagogical specialization (Science, Social Science, and Language).
- There is no significant difference between the mean scores of knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom on the basis of their pedagogical specialization (Science, Social Science, and Language).

- There is no significant relationship between the attitude and knowledge of B.Ed. Special Education (HI) students towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in a general classroom.
- It is apparent that the inclusion of students with disabilities into general classrooms is one of the best ways to incorporate the feelings of acceptance, tolerance, and respect among peer groups as well as teachers.

CONCLUSION

Inclusive education is seen as an approach and means to respond to diversity, wherein the emphasis will be on welcoming and valuing a diverse range of interests, needs, abilities, and achievements which will bring about reducing barriers and hindrances to learning and participation for all learners. It is believed that improvement in inclusion will follow exclusion as inclusion is related to a decrease in inequity and inequality both in the social and economic spheres, both in starting positions and opportunities. At the same time, inclusive education is also commonly understood as an issue concerning only disabled students or those categorized as having special educational needs.

EDUCATIONAL IMPLICATIONS

Since the present study is conducted on prospective teachers' attitude and knowledge towards the inclusion of students with disabilities in the general classroom. The study has its implications for teachers, parents, administrators, and government as given below:

- Recommendation of NEP 2020 on equitable and inclusive will enable teachers, experts, curriculum framers, and policymakers to develop and reorient the teacher education curriculum. Also, it can be reviewed as many times as needed.

- Integration of inclusive education will lay a strong foundation in the teacher education programmes which will be conducive for the creation of an 'inclusive society'.
- The parents should show openness while discussing the problem of their child. It will enable teachers to understand their pupils effectively and it will help them to bring the students to mainstreaming.
- Also, it will enable the parents of Special Education Needs (SEN) to understand the importance of inclusive education so that they place their children in an inclusive classroom rather than placing them in a segregated setting.
- It will help administrators to recognize the problem on the real ground and hence will help them to act accordingly.
- Government should allocate more funds to implement the policies and make a provision for the regular supervision of the policies for their smooth functioning.
- The knowledge of inclusive education gives prospective teachers the freedom to experiment in their teaching practice and the ability to make changes if something doesn't work and it will help them to work effectively in an inclusive system.
